

Now, More than Ever, We Need a Positive Economic Vision for the Future.

We at the Connecticut Jobs and Human Rights Task Force and the National Jobs for All Network (NJFAN) are committed to building a more just and equitable future for all.

We envision a world in which all people are guaranteed access to good, living wage jobs that contribute positively to economic and environmental sustainability; rather than a system predicated on the pursuit of profit at the expense of human dignity, safety, freedom, and self-determination.

As we grapple with an economic and political system that is collapsing under the weight of its own internal contradictions, we choose to stand up for ourselves and each other.

What will the future look like? Who gets to decide?

Please Join Us on March 25th for a Town Hall Meeting and Open Discussion!

Featured Presentations Will Include:

Robert D. Leighninger Jr., Sociologist, scholar and educator who has written extensively on the building programs of the New Deal. He edited the Journal of Sociology and Social Welfare for more than twenty years, and he serves as a member of the Board of Directors with the Living New Deal project.

Henry Lowendorf, Peace Activist since the 1960s, Greater New Haven Peace Council Chair, and a member of the Executive Board of the US Peace Council.
